Documentation for Exercises. Some exercises may require adding new functionality to Declensr. If you're confident about programming it yourself, feel free to do so and open a pull request. If not, open an issue describing what functionality you'll need for the exercise and label it "request: functionality" and "request: exercise." Implementing new grammars. For some languages, all the functionality you need will already be built into Declensr's codebase. Independent variable: Documentation style: We use three documentation philosophies, as described in section 2, each with a similar purpose: to complete the given work task. Dependent variables: Semi Completion time: Time taken for the subjects to do their first compilation. Completion time: The time taken to finish the entire exercise. From the results, we realize that the effects of the patterns style documentation are not supreme all the time. Perhaps, for intermediate users, patterns are not always the best.
